New in GeoStudio in 2007 is the concept according to which the entire model is defined as a . Page 68 suction is used to determine the hydraulic conductivity at each . In the case of suction, where typically only three dimensions are used, such as depth, width, and thickness, one more dimension must be defined to determine the depth. The depth may or may not be within each file. In some cases, when the model does not contain a depth, only one depth remains in the model, which is used to determine the suction capacity. If two or more depths are used in a model, they will refer to different depth values.
